A Note from Scott

A Prophetic Imagination

The greatest Bible scholar of our time died on June 5. Walter Brueggemann was a deep influence on thousands of clergy, including myself. His Biblical scholarship was written for the pastor, with a focus on the proclamation of the Word. He wrote well, with the skill of a poet. Plus, he was a constant presence at preaching conferences—as effective a public speaker and preacher as he was a writer. It's strange for me to imagine being in this career without new, wise words from Brueggemann.

He was 92 and continued to write and publish. He had taught at Eden and Columbia Theological Seminaries and was an ordained minister in the United Church of Christ. Brueggemann was born in Tilden, Nebraska and grew up at Friedens Evangelische Kirche (now Peace UCC) where his father was the longtime, beloved pastor. In my church in Omaha, I had one congregant who had also grown up in that church with Brueggemann.

In their obituary, the World Communion of Reformed Churches wrote of him, he “was more than a scholar; he was a prophetic witness to a collapsing world and a vision for new life beyond that collapse. His work challenged the church to face hard realities — the failure of old certitudes, the disintegration of empires, and the urgent call to love neighbor amid economic and social injustice.”

I have relied deeply upon his books, commentaries, articles, and lectures, to understand the Bible and the task of preaching. For instance, after the inauguration in 2017, he published an essay in which he encouraged preachers to go “back to the basics” and simply let the basics of the Biblical message speak to congregants. His conviction was that the core themes of the Bible were relevant to our current needs without having to respond directly to each new event in the news. He also somehow published a book on responding to the pandemic that came out in 2020 while we were all still in lockdown!

I treasure his commentaries on the Psalms and the Book of Isaiah. His Theology of the Old Testament is a constant companion. In the preface of the latter, he wrote about how the scholarly consensus that had existed in the middle of the twentieth century is now in disarray. But he delighted in that disarray because it permitted “venturesome efforts at Old Testament theology.” Even more importantly, he thought the disarray better reflected the nature of scripture and “the unsettled Character who stands at the center of the text.” But his single most important work, including on my own thinking and preaching, was The Prophetic Imagination. Not only did that book present a framework for understanding the prophetic books of the Old Testament, it was also a call to the vital role of prophetic ministry for the contemporary American church which Brueggemann found to be numbed and too “enculturated to the American ethos of consumerism.” The thesis of the book was clearly and boldly stated, “The task of prophetic ministry is to nurture, nourish, and evoke a consciousness and perception alternative to the consciousness and perception of the dominant culture around us.” May this great Christian scholar of our time rest in peace and rise in glory for all his contributions to the gospel. Peace,
Scott

HOH Foundation News

In recent months, I've had the privilege of helping bring a new vision to life—one that honors House of Hope's traditions while reaching toward the future. In addition to the extraordinary weekend we've planned with Renée Fleming, I'm pleased to share some of the other early developments in the work of Hope Arts Center. In partnership and service, Madeline Cieslak, Executive Director

HOPE ARTS CENTER:

Introducing Hope Arts Center Movies In the Park

Tuesday, August 19 | 6 p.m.

Join friends from House of Hope and from the neighborhood for a free presentation of Flow, the 2024 Academy Award winner for Best Animated Feature.

Exploring themes of survival, friendship, and climate, Flow is told through music, stunning visuals, and sounds of animals and nature, with no spoken language. The movie is broadly appealing to children and adults, as well as pets! Non-reactive dogs and cats are welcome, on leash or secured. Bring your lawn chairs or a blanket, and a picnic supper. Bug spray is recommended. Ice cream will be provided. This event is free and open to the public.

ComMUSICation:

Monday - Wednesday, July 7-30 | 3:30 - 5:30 p.m.

Hope Arts Center is delighted to introduce a new friendship with ComMUSICation, a Twin Cities nonprofit dedicated to providing free music education and performance opportunities to youth. This July, House of Hope will host ComMUSICation's Summer Gospel Choir Camp. Open to youth in grades 3–12, this free program is an opportunity to meet Gospel musicians, learn harmonies, and explore the powerful history and impact of Gospel music. Participants will have the chance to perform with a live band at major community events like Rondo Days and VFest at Hallie Q. Brown Community Center. ComMUSICation was founded in 2013 to make high quality after-school music programs accessible to youth. At CMC, music is the special language that builds confidence, community, and capacity for change. Participants learn life and leadership skills, build community across schools and cultures, and perform frequently in amazing locations. Learn more: www.commusicationmn.org

Carl A. Weyerhaeuser Ministry Anniversary

Forty-five years ago, Carl A.

Weyerhaeuser made a generous gift to House of Hope by donating his family home on Summit Avenue. The home was sold, and the proceeds were used to establish the Carl A. Weyerhaeuser Ministry to sustain the church's distinction as a place of worship and to engage the community in meaningful dialogue around societal issues through the creation of a speaker and performance series, featuring "people with deep discernment and profound commentary."

The endowment has supported the invitation of clergy to preach and well-known speakers and artists to participate in the Sunday Series. Formally dedicated on September 30, 1984, Former President Gerald R. Ford delivered the inaugural address. Over the years, distinguished guests have included Former U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, U.N. Ambassador Jeanne Kirkpatrick, White House Press Secretary Bill Moyers, and conductor Robert Shaw. More recently, the Series has welcomed Dr. Jill Biden, George Takei, Harry Belafonte, columnist David Brooks, Justice Alan C. Page, and historian Heather Cox Richardson. The Carl A. Weyerhaeuser Ministry continues to enrich the lives of House of Hope's congregation and the broader community—fostering connection, curiosity, and thoughtful engagement. We remain deeply grateful for the vision and generosity that made this legacy possible.

We offer thanks to Linda Smith for her research and contributions to this article.

HOH Roof and Solar Panel Update

The three-phase project outlined in the April Anchor is now underway.

Phase 1: Flat Roof Replacement

After waiting for the building permit to be issued and several weeks of rainy weather in May, work is now fully underway. Disruptions to church activities are being closely coordinated with the contractor and have been minimal.

Phase 2: Slate Roof Repair and Sealant Replacement

The project specification has just been completed and is now out for bid. We anticipate contractor selection with work on-site work to begin in July.

Phase 3: Solar Panel Installation

Xcel Energy's Interconnection Agreement review process has been completed and approved. This approval is critical in allowing House of Hope's solar array to operate and be connected to the electrical grid. Scheduling will be completed in coordination with material delivery dates and completion of the flat roof work.

Watch for updates as work continues!

Earth Care

Plastic Free July

Plastic pollution has become one of the most pressing environmental issues affecting our planet, human health, and wildlife. Worldwide, 2 million plastic bags are used every minute, more than 40% of plastic is used once and then thrown away, less than 10% of plastic products are recycled, and plastic takes hundreds of years to break down. The pervasive harm done by plastic pollution to biological life and planetary ecosystems impels each of us to reduce our plastic waste. Ready to take on a challenge? Join 100+ million participants in 190 countries that have committed to a Plastic Free July®—a global movement to refuse single-use plastics during the month of July (and beyond). Welcome to the Circle of Grace!

The Circle of Grace is a new community at The House of Hope Presbyterian Church. Within this circle, we invite each other into conversation and practices which strengthen and deepen our connection with the Divine and with one another. To begin, we will offer three gatherings in the fall and three in the spring, to ponder God and explore faith. At our first gathering, Julia Carlson will lead a conversation around the idea of life as a spiritual journey. In addition to presentations and discussion, we will spend time in prayer and spiritual practices including nature practices.

The Library will be available at 5 p.m. Structured group time will follow from 5:30 - 6:30 p.m. with the room available until 7 p.m.
